The result of this study shows that there are six relevant project-based learning characteristics from pertinent resources and have been integrated in the learning processes, there are: Implicating student active engagement, incorporating communication and collaboration, implementing meaningful task, process-based learning, emphasizing learner autonomous, and implicating problem-based competences. However, within the characteristics, there are some indicators that have not been integrated in the four learning processes, such as arousing student curiosity, assigning task in group, implementing the task sequence based on difficulty, establishing students' real experiences, and eliciting the meaning under teacher's guidance.
