

ABSTRACT

JESSICA VIRGINIA ANDRIES. Planting of Islamic Religiosity Child on A Middle Class Family (Study: Four Families at Perum Visar Indah Pratama RT 8 RW 12 Cibinong District Subdistrict Village Cibinong Bogor, West Java). Thesis, Jakarta: Study Program of Sociology, Department of Sociology, Faculty of Social Sciences, State University of Jakarta, 2016.

This study describes the process of socialization and behavior about the reflection of Islamic religiosity children in Perum Visar Indah Pratama RT 8 RW 12 Cibinong, Bogor. This research aims to clarify the process of socialization of the middle-class family in instilling values that reflect the Islamic religiosity on the child and knowing the form of behaviour that appears as a reflection of the Islamic religiosity in everyday life. This research is a study using qualitative approach with descriptive research method. To obtain the data in the field, this research uses techniques of observation, interview and documentation.

The results shows that middle-class families as agents of socialization which instill religious values in children through the process of socialization in social construction perspective, there are externalization, objectivation, and internalization. Parents are doing an activity on a consistent basis in order to instill values that reflect the values of Islamic religiosity in the form of an open mindset and values the responsibility on the child in the middle of the risk the progress and development of current technologies. After such action is considered appropriate, then the logical child consciousness would formulate the facts that happened because there are rules that govern it. This is the stage of the objectivation, the children reflect the values of Islamic religiosity in the form of an open mindset and values of responsibility, then the child will absorb these values as a reflection of Islamic religiosity to shape behavior of children in everyday life.

The results of this study concludes that parents of middle-class families realize that the development of science and technology who made growing smart parents should take a crack in disseminating Islamic values in the living along with the development of increasingly advanced ages. This can be useful as a handle for a living in the middle of the risk progress and technological development at the time of this now so that it is able to build his social life well without violating the teachings of the religion.

Keywords: Family, Socialization, Religiosity